Session I - Fundamentals of Shared Societies

Leave no one behind: the importance of social inclusion in the Post 2015 sustainable development agenda

Four Seasons Hotel, Segah Ballroom

Objective: Introduce critical policy considerations, including the “Shared Societies” concept to better embrace social inclusion within the new SDG’s. Provide concrete recommendations within the framework of and at this stage of the Post 2015 development agenda deliberations. Discussion should improve understanding of the synergies between policies for inclusive economic growth and equal opportunities for decent work, high quality education and other social services. Outcome should focus on targeted mainstreaming of social inclusion, particularly for women, minorities, youth and other marginalized identity groups, within the Post 2015 Sustainable Development Goals.

16:30 - 18:00 Session III
Shared Societies as a Driver in Conflict Resolution
Four Seasons Hotel, Segah Ballroom

Objective: Few countries today are totally homogeneous and most are multicultural for a variety of historical or contemporary reasons. That poses challenges for internal peace and security, as well as for social justice and inclusivity. In some countries and regions, peace, truth and reconciliation are the most important priorities, in other countries it is a matter of combating prejudice, xenophobia, social inequalities and social exclusion. Both research and practical observation prove without any doubt, that peace, stability, justice and mutual tolerance offer the best guarantees for economic growth and prosperity, which in turn improves the health, life expectancy, literacy, numeracy, and creativeness of the inhabitants. Truly shared societies, together with international cooperation, rather than conflict or negative interference from abroad, can then create a nurturing and diversified environment, where the talents and possibilities of every individual can contribute to the greater welfare of all. In this session, speakers will share their insights and experience of conflict resolution and social integration.
